The Vicar Writes

Dear Friends

If Jesus was here today, he wouldn't be allowed to get away with half the miracles he performed in the past. It's not just that we live in such sceptical, cynical times; it's all the red tape that would be involved. Here are a few examples:

Walking on water – This could only be done if it was preceded by a disclaimer that nobody should try this at home, particularly not by children.

Turning water into wine – This would provoke immediate protests from the drinks industry, who would argue that it was unfair competition. It would also be denounced by various bodies as irresponsible and likely to lead to drunkenness.

Feeding the Five Thousand – Serving bread and fish to thousands of people at an outdoor event would require the approval of government health inspectors to ensure that the food had been prepared by qualified food handlers in a hygienic environment. Baskets of leftovers would also need to be disposed of properly.

Raising the Dead – Environmental health officers would be very unhappy about this, as there are stringent rules governing the proper disposal of bodies. There would also be major difficulties when the recently deceased tried to use their credit cards!

We have thought about all these miracles in recent weeks in our services, and we noticed that they all have one thing in common; they show us reality. They give us a glimpse of what the world really is like – how it really is when it responds to the love of our creator God.

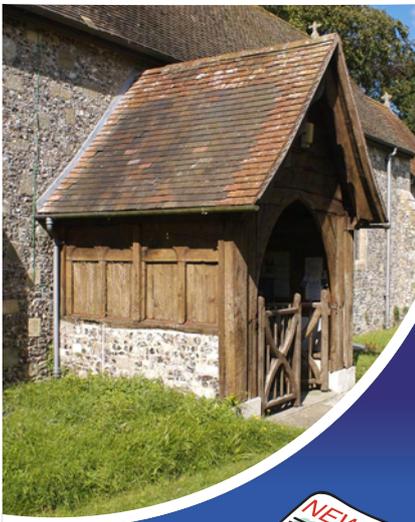

Do these miracles make you ask questions? Do you ask how could they possibly happen? Do they still happen? What relevance do these events have to me? If they set you thinking, think about coming along to the Alpha Course, at 14 High Street, Sixpenny Handley. It begins on October 1st, and you can get more details from Paul Skinner (see side bar on left). You will need to get your skates on if you haven't booked in by the time you are reading this, although we hope to run the course again after Christmas.

And Jesus, walking on the water, seems to be doing the impossible... but sometimes, some people have had the idea that it would be a good idea to copy him and do the impossible too. Some people set off with the aim of bringing his complete love and great power, his absolute peace and hope, to a needy and suffering world. To do that they need to get out of the boat.

And what we are all called to do, so basic and obvious, yet often so hard to do in practice, is to keep our eyes fixed on Jesus and our ears open for his encouragement. God is closer to us than our own breath and deeper inside us than our own heartbeat. All we have to do is recognize God for what he is. We can all do it – but if you want to walk on water you've got to get out of the boat...

Your Friend and Vicar, Mel

Healing Service

We have another Healing Service at St Mary's in the evening of the last Sunday in November.

Come along and share prayer for healing and wholeness in an atmosphere of quiet and stillness at St Mary's. How big our faith is does not matter – rather, it is how big our God is.

KINGDOM PEOPLE

David Lockyer

Surfing the net like you do, I came across a sermon by Rev Charles Royden of St Mark's Church near Hertford that I used as the basis of an address I gave one Sunday morning in July. This is a shortened version of that talk.

God is at work in our world. He is active and present. However, we are free to ignore God and mess up our lives - when people ask why God has done something bad, the answer normally is that he hasn't. The truth is that we are able to do bad things all by ourselves. God treats us like adults and gives us the power to choose, and we are free to accept or reject what He offers. He allows us to make mistakes and does not take away our freedom. God wants to work in our lives, but to have his way, he needs our co-operation.

Have you noticed how people will give up almost anything to get what they want? Some give up major things for a career and then say "I really wish I had spent more time with my children." People will give up everything if they find something they really want. And Jesus asks us:

- What will you give up?
- What do you consider to be most important?
- Have you got your priorities right?

If people make a choice not to go to church, they also made a choice for their families with a knock-on effect bouncing down the generations. When you stop going, you have prevented your children and your grandchildren and great-grandchildren hearing the Good News.

The kingdom of heaven is like a mustard seed, which a man took and planted in his field. Though it is the smallest of all your seeds, yet when it grows it is the largest of garden plants and becomes a tree, so that the birds of the air come and perch in its branches. Matthew 13:31-32

Some of you will know about what the King of Kings Kid's Club has been doing with children and young families. We must be thankful to the team of active volunteers who have taken it forward and developed this mission. It is a tiny seed but it is growing and has the potential to achieve much, much more. Jesus took an example of smallness, the mustard seed, and made the point that it would grow hugely. But God's Kingdom is not imposing:

The kingdom of heaven is like treasure hidden in a field. When a man found it, he hid it again, and then in his joy went and sold all that he had and bought that field. Matthew 13:44

In the old days before locks and safes, you buried treasure keeping its location to yourself so that it would be secure, rather like your pin number today. Sometime this resulted in treasure being forgotten - the owner might die and their treasure remain undiscovered. Then something of life-changing value might be right under your feet, unseen.

Then someone finds the treasure and recognises it for what it is, and for them any price is worth paying to gain such infinite value. God's Kingdom is the greatest of treasures, worth more than any one of us can ever fully know. Jesus is reassuring us that the Kingdom is beyond price.

The Christian life is often thought of as a sacrifice, a cross to be carried, yet this has to be balanced by these parables which remind us that the Kingdom of Heaven may start small but is a treasure so wonderful that we can joyfully give up everything to possess it - and we will not be disappointed. So are we performing as God's seed in the world? Do our lives speak of Christ because our faith is making us better people? How big is the harvest of our lives? Is it tiny because our imaginations are too small, or are we fruitful Christians? What message do our lives tell to our community as a church as well as individuals?

So sow! And grow!
And know!

In September, nearly forty children enjoyed learning about the story Jesus told about the sower and the seeds. Each child made a scene to take home, to see how their mustard and cress grew on the different types of earth the seed fell on, and each group made a large scene which should be growing - or not! - by Harvest Festival. Come into St Mary's and see! They also played games and sang songs and made up some new actions.
